

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A backlight unit includes a light source for originating light; a light guide plate including incident portions through which light originated from the light source enters and an emitting portion for emitting the entered light; and a chassis including a first recessed portion having a first depth and on which the light source is located and a second recessed portion having a second depth deeper than the first depth and a size adjusted for the light guide plate and on which the light guide plate is located.